

REDUCE RISK AND AVOID FINES: GET GDPR-READY WITH A GLOBAL PARTNER

Assess Your GDPR Readiness Now

General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) is a European privacy law going into effect on May 25, 2018. The purpose of GDPR is to regulate data security standards to better protect the personal data of EU citizens. The new law will have stricter penalties for non-compliance than previous legislation. Therefore, in order to avoid fines as high as 4 percent of global revenue and other risks, companies must ready themselves.

Why is GDPR so important?

GDPR affects any organization that handles EU residents' data, regardless of where that entity operates. The law will regulate the collection, storage and use of personal data, which can include anything from customer and HR databases to CCTV footage and photos. In comparison to the current Data Protection Directive, GDPR will be a required law and puts a larger emphasis on individual rights.

Key changes to know:

- Individuals will have the right to access, correct, erase and export personal data.
- Organizations must establish security controls to prevent, detect and respond to data breaches to ensure personal data is appropriately protected.
- Transparency will be enforced and require organizations to provide clear notice of data collection, retention and deletion policies.
- There will be requirements for IT and training to ensure auditing, data policy and vendor contract management remain compliant with new laws.

Can you identify what personal data you have and how it's being used?

Getting prepared for GDPR is complex and time consuming. This may require huge changes in your company's privacy and data management habits. A delicate process handling vital personal data is not something to take lightly.

CuroGens supports IT and business intelligence needs of companies worldwide, and can skillfully assess GDPR readiness using a toolset available to Microsoft network partners. For more information, visit www.curogens.com/GDPR.

About CuroGens, Inc.

CuroGens, Inc, is a technology services provider and systems integrator serving the IT and business intelligence needs of companies worldwide. Our team of software architects and project managers connect organizations to the power of data in industries such as transportation, manufacturing, education and professional services.

As a Microsoft partner, we provide:

- Software System Integration, Upgrade and Implementation
- Custom Solution Development
- Business Consulting and IT Advisory

Gold Enterprise Resource Planning

Get Started Today with a Preliminary Assessment

learnmore@curogens.com | +1 317-815-8120 | www.curogens.com
14300 Clay Terrace Boulevard, Suite 269, Carmel, IN 46032
Canada | Denmark | Ghana | Spain | USA